Expert tells business gals: Cuss your way to the top!

Spaceship pictured over Egypt 3,000 years ago!

Drawing of UFO found in pyramid!

By RAGAN GUNN

A scientist claims to have found a drawing of a flying saucer on the wall of an Egyptian tomb!

"This is it — this is the evidence we've been looking for," Dr. Isadora Demaure told reporters in Paris. "Space aliens really did contact the ancient Egyptians.

"This drawing proves it — once and for all."

The expert refused to say exactly where the drawing is located other than to say she found it in a 3,000-year-old tomb on the banks of the Nile.

She acknowledged that some of her colleagues would like to inspect the tomb before declaring the drawing authentic.

But she insists that it is genuine — and claims her still photographs and video-tapes prove it.

"The spaceship appears to be of classic UFO design," Dr. Demaure said. "It rather looks like an upside-down dinner plate with a lip or a rib running around its lower edge.

"There is a cockpit or observation deck on top, covered with a clear dome. There is also a lighted dome underneath, but there are no visible life-forms.

"I have no doubt that this is a spaceship," she added. "There is nothing else it could be."

Fragments of an unusually strong and lightweight metal found in the tomb have so far defied analysis, said the expert.

"But there is a very real possibility that they are extra-terrestrial in origin," she continued. "They certainly aren't familiar to us.

"They are nothing like we have ever seen before."

The expert is currently negotiating with a major Euro-pean publisher who wants rights to the photos and video-tape she shot inside the tomb.

Dr. Demaure refused to say how much she has been offered. But publishing sources say she'll get at least $75,000 for the photo package, maybe more.

Quoted by newsmen, Egyptologist Andre Lafont called Dr. Demaure's discovery "interesting but unbelievable."

"UFO researchers and Egyptologists already know that extraterrestrials were in contact with the ancient Egyptians," he said.

"Space aliens gave them many secrets of their culture. They helped them build the pyramids."

Cops say teen killed her brother in fight over food

By JACK ALEXANDER

Teenager Pamela Cook wasn't pleased when her bullying brother drank her orange juice, but cops said when he tried to eat her egg she blew him away with a shotgun.

Demetrius Cook, 16, died instantly from a blast in the face. His 17-year-old sister was booked in a Tulsa, Okla., jail under a $1 million bond, charged with second-degree murder.

"He apparently teased and taunted her a little too much and she reacted," said Police Lt. Randy Crudorff.

other family members when Demetrius grabbed Pamela's juice and gulped it down, said Lt. Crudorff.

"When she got mad and told him to leave her breakfast alone, Demetrius threatened to eat her eggs, too," he said. The suspect said that if he touched her eggs she was going to get a .410-gauge shotgun and shoot him, but Demetrius didn't believe her, said Lt. Crudorff. A few minutes later she got the shotgun and her brother kept taunting her, telling her she didn't have the guts, said Lt. Crudorff.

"That's when she pulled the trigger, according to witnesses," he said.

Bizarre robbery

Officials are still trying to figure out why a gun-toting woman kidnapped a meat carver, took him to her home, searched his bag — and let him go! "If there was any reason for it she hasn't told us,"

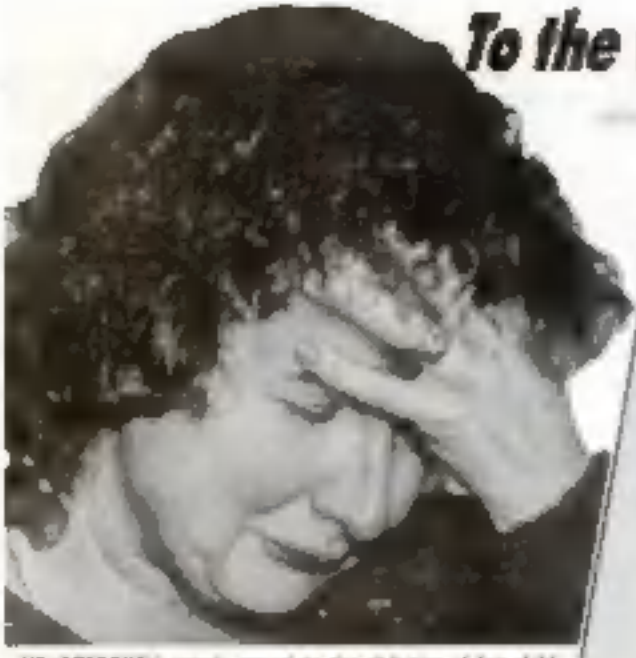
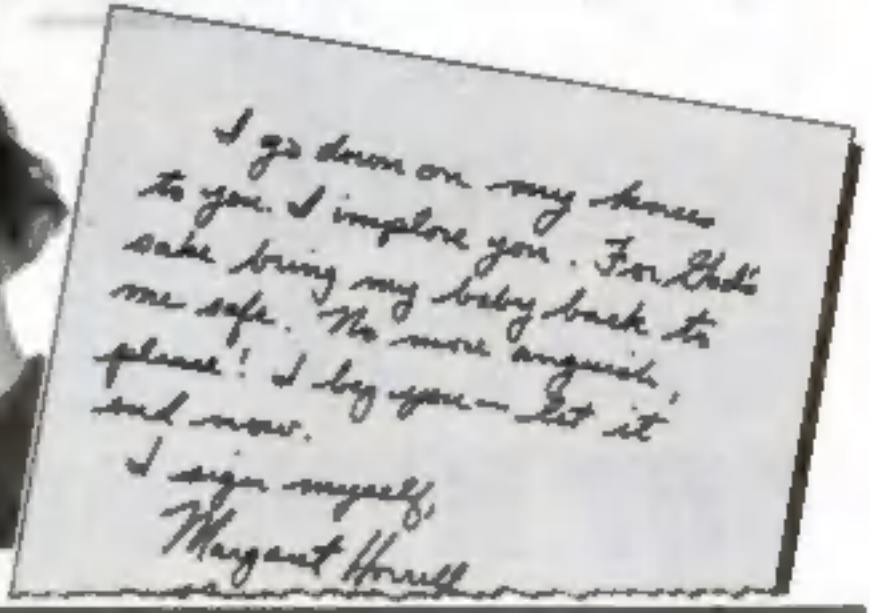
To the woman who stole my baby . . .





HEARTBROKEN mum's appeal to the abductor of her child worked and the baby was turned over to police.

Anguished mom's letter melts kidnapper's heart

"I go down on my knees to you. I implore you. For God's sake bring my baby back to me safe. No more anguish, please! Let it end now."

With those pitiful words, desperate mum Margaret Horrell addressed the woman who kidnapped her daughter Natalie — and melted the heart of the little girl's abductor.

Days later, little 9-month-old Natalie was back in Margaret's arms and her kidnapper had surrendered to police.

"We are so grateful to have her back," said delighted Margaret, 33, as she cuddled her precious baby.

"Nothing can compare to the anguish we felt while she was missing — and nothing can compare to the joy we feel now that she's back home again."

The dramatic story of Natalie's disappearance gripped the heart of a nation as newspapers across Britain told of the little girl's abduction. Margaret — of Caerphilly, South Wales — had taken her child into a department store. A woman posing as a store detective walked away with the baby.

A frantic search by police and volunteers failed to turn up clues to the baby's whereabouts, so heartbroken Margaret thought of a last, desperate plea.

She wrote a heartrending letter which was published in issues of many British newspapers.

By SUSAN EMMON

read it and give back her daughter.

The letter read:

To the woman who stole my baby

I am appealing to you as the mother of Natalie and as one woman to another, to think long and hard about what you have done to me and to my family. I love children and I love my baby.

I want her back more than anything. I have ever wanted in my life. If you do not want to give her back yet, just give me a message somehow and prove . . . that she is well.

I don't suppose you know the hell you are putting me through because you are not feeling it as I am. Can you possibly imagine this torture? I am without my precious baby. I can't eat or sleep.

Before, the worst thing I could ever fear was to lose Natalie through something like a cot death. Never in my worst nightmare could I have ever thought of this.

As the days go by I get weaker. You are destroying me bit by bit. You have completely devastated my life.

You have done to me the suffering of what you have done. I could forgive you as long as Natalie were returned safe and well. Please, please tell me she is safe.

Is there anything you want me to do to get Natalie back? If there is, then please tell me because I will do almost anything. The only thing you can never ask of me is to give up my Natalie — I won't rest until she is found safe and well.

I go down on my knees to you. I implore you. For God's sake bring my baby back to me safe. No more anguish, please. I beg you — let it end now.

I sign myself,

Margaret Horrell, Natalie's True Mother.

Days passed without word of Natalie. Then a miracle occurred.

Margaret and her husband Paul, 31, received a phone call from police. A woman had surrendered herself to authorities in a city 200 miles away. She had handed over little Natalie — safe, sound and crying for her mother!

Hours later Natalie was home again and the baby's ecstatic family was celebrating her return. Her abductor was charged with kidnapping and

GERBIL TIED TO PARACHUTE AND TOSSED OUT WINDOW

Animal cruelty on campus

A college kid is accused of tying a tiny parachute to his pet gerbil and dropping the little critter out of an 11th-story window — over and over again.

The parachuting pet's skydiving experience ended when he crashed into a tall pine tree outside a men's dorm on the campus of Iowa State University.

"He's had a harrowing ordeal, but he's okay," said campus security officer Mary Jo Lemmeter.

Brian Hannold, a backup quarterback on the university football team, has been charged with animal cruelty, a misdemeanor.

"He would drop the gerbil out the window, go down and get it and drop it again," said animal control officer Bev Burton.

Witnesses said when the free-falling rodent got tangled up in the tree, Hannold, 19, tried to free it by throwing footballs at the tree limbs, she said.

The gerbil spent the night in the tree. Hannold tried to free his pet the next morning by throwing a basketball at the limb but that didn't work, either, said Mrs. Burton.

Campus police and Mrs. Burton were alerted to the gerbil's plight by an anonymous call. They rescued the furry pet with a mechanical cherry picker used by the power company.

Hannold couldn't remember how many times he dropped his pet out the window, said officer Lemmeter.

"He had no explanation as to why he decided to do it," she said.

"I guess it was a way to relax from final exams."

Expert tells business gals: Cuss your way to the top!

Hey ladies, if you want to get ahead in business become a foul-mouthed cussin' queen!

Debra Benton, president of Benton Management Resources in Ft. Collins, Colo., says a colorful shocker dropped at just the right time can work wonders!

"The occasional, selective and highly conscious use of profanity is the mark of success," says Benton, portraying a "shocking words" for teaching gal execs to become dynamos!

Eighty percent of male bigwigs swear, yet only 12 percent of gals admit doing it on the job.

Before you start cussin' up a storm however, you should memorize three tricks of the trade, Benton continued.

● Follow footsteps of the group leader. Don't cuss until he does.

● When you curse, don't be shrieky ..... Benton says. Say "——— me!" out loud and mean it!

● Don't direct a nasty word at a person, but at a circumstance or issue. Even with perfect timing, 30 the (especially your boss) will like it if you look him straight in the eyeballs and say, "You (pervert)!"

"There's an added element of humor when women curse that diffuses tense situations," Benton added. "This can gain women respect and inclusion among male peers."

Whining killer blames crime on bad childhood

By JACK ALEXANDER

A killer who stabbed a woman 50 times asked her family to forgive him — and blamed his bloody crime on his bad childhood.

"I promise I will get the help I need ... her relatives abuse of me," wrote murderer Christopher Hutchens.

He was convicted of killing Rita Botello last year after meeting the 22-year-old mother in a San Antonio, Tex., bar.

In a letter to her family, Hutchens claimed he was an abused child, ... prayed I would get the death penalty for the crime I committed, but the courts were too kind and instead gave me a life sentence," he wrote.

When told about the letter, prosecutor Fred Rodriguez remarked, "I wish I could have accommodated him on the death penalty."

A-bomb fears turn tribe into . . .

MOLE PEOPLE

DEFECTOR. This tiger warrior was once a member of the underground tribe.

MAP shows jungle location of mole people tribe.

By LAUREL BOWIE

Astonished scientists have discovered a bizarre band of mole people who live in a damp, dark underground cavern — and haven't seen a ray of daylight since 1945!

The terrified cannibal tribe dug itself a home deep under the floor of a New Guinea jungle 40 years ago after an American visitor warned villagers that a nuclear holocaust could wipe out the world.

"The Americans plane crashed outside the Urubuluans' village at the height of the Cold War," anthropologist Axel Stampe told a scientific conference in Copenhagen, Denmark.

"The Urubuluans were so impressed by his flying machine they thought he must be a god and they nursed him back to health.

"When he told them about the dangers of the A-bomb, the natives began digging themselves a crude bomb shelter where they could wait out the war."

Later, the cataphoby savages must have decided that U.S. soldier of fortune Rory Dunker wasn't a god after all — because they cut off his head and ate him, Dr. Stampe said.

But ever since then, more than 300 Urubuluans have lived in a hot, humid hole 180 feet underground, waiting for the bombs to fall.

"Three of the bravest warriors are designated to go above ground on occasions to bring back food, water and firewood for the entire tribe," the anthropologist said.

"But the vast majority of the people haven't seen the sunshine in 40 years ... and those born after 1945 haven't seen it at all."

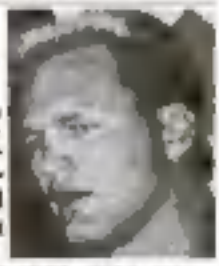
Besides berries and gums brought from above, the scared natives survive mostly on mushrooms and bugs found in their cave.

"For four decades, they have done little but sit around their fires and tell stories about the old days," Dr. Stampe said.

The Danish anthropologist learned of the bomb-shy tribe when he met two deserters during a visit to New Guinea last February.

"These men went out to gather food and never went back," Dr. Stampe told fellow scientists. "They said life in that hole was so boring they'd rather be blown to bits in the real world than go back down below."

The crewcut's back, boast busy barbers



GRID STAR Brian Bosworth sports the new look.

A reincarnated version of the crewcut, a flattop designer hairdo called "the bar," is the latest rage in men's hairstyles!

The fad has barbers abuzz with excitement over their booming business. And their clippers are buzzing, too. The trend looks as if guys are wearing pillbox hats, said barber Danny Lagos of Danny's His & Her Hairstyling in Norfolk, Va.

"It has to be clipped real close to the head and we like it up to make it more busy."

A do with close side clippings is called a "fade." A "light fade" has a little hair on the sides.

Many guys enjoy getting initials, hearts or other personalized designs carved into the hair.

And the do requires careful upkeep, usually a biweekly trim.

Daredevil gramps, 82, leaps into the record books

World's oldest sky diver!

By LIZ THOMAS

Daredevil great-grandpop Ernest "Chick" Clayton — oldest active parachutist in the world — achieved a lifelong ambition by jumping with England's Army's ex-pert free-fall parachute team!

The virile 82-year-old Australian, who has 31 great grandchildren, melted the heart of "Iron Lady" Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher with his recent request to jump with the Red Devils.

"I told Mrs. Thatcher I was coming to England in the spring to visit my two sisters who live in Newcastle-under-Lyme," Chick said. "Then a couple of months later I got a call from the Red Devils and could have dropped through the ceiling when I heard I'd been given the all clear."

The spry adventurer dropped 7,000 feet after making a piggy-back tandem leap with Pvt. William Cummings.

They free-fell at 300 m.p.h. to 2,000 feet before the chute opened, allowing them to safely land on earth!

"This was the proudest moment of my life," Chick said. "It was fantastic, the old adrenaline was still pumping."

Chick, born in England, emigrated to Australia in the 1920s. The veteran parachutist jumped to pay tribute to colleagues killed in World War 2.

A 200-drop vet, Chick made his first jump in 1945, from a barrage balloon at a British Army parachute training center in England.

Chick also made drops in Normandy and the Philippines to rescue wounded soldiers.

Now, six of Chick's 31 grandkids plan to join parachute clubs back home in Broadmeadows, Australia.

SHOCKING ERROR FOLLOWS TRAIN MISHAP

Wife gets husband's body parts in a box

When John Walker fell to his death from a train, his horror was echoed by his wife weeks later, a lawsuit claims — when she opened a package and found his mangled body parts!

Margie L. Walker of Seattle, Wash., has filed suit against Restlawn Memorial Park funeral home in Coeur d'Alene and officials of Kootenai County in Idaho.

The widow says she suffered extreme emotional distress when she discovered the rotting remains in the package.

"She was terribly upset," her attorney, Arthur Graham, told The NEWS. "We're asking several million dollars for pain and mental anguish."

Walker, 58, and his wife were traveling by train in Louisiana in August 1984, when he disappeared. His wife searched the train and when he was not found, returned home to await word of his fate.

A week later his body was discovered beside the train tracks in rural Idaho.

After an autopsy, Idaho officials made arrangements to send Walker's body — and his personal effects — home to Seattle.

"The mix-up happened because the body parts and the personal effects were placed in the evidence room and then taken to Restlawn Memorial Park," Graham said.

"The white bag containing the body parts was put inside a green plastic bag labeled 'Personal Effects.' Allegedly, county officials told Restlawn that the parts were inside the bag, but there was a screw up. No one took them out."

A lawyer for Restlawn says that the green plastic bag was handed over by his client to a funeral home in Seattle, Bonney Watson. He says Restlawn told Bonney Watson employees the bag held body parts and Bonney Watson erred in not checking the effects.

Cigarette butt thrown from car sets man ablaze!

By JACK ALEXANDER

Horrified Michael Hill was turned into a human fireball when a passing motorist flipped out a cigarette — igniting gasoline Hill was draining from a car.

Hill, 30, suffered agonizing burns on his arms and side in the inferno that destroyed three cars.

The freak accident occurred after Hill ran out of gas near Maidstone, England. He phoned friend Anne Martin who drove to his aid.

Hill had crawled under her car to disconnect the fuel line before draining gasoline into a bucket. That's when the cigarette rolled under the car.

Flames engulfed his clothes as Hill writhed in excruciating pain. Bystanders extinguished the flames, rolled him in a blanket and called an ambulance. The fire destroyed Hill's car, Miss Martin's Austin Princess and an expensive Rover parked nearby.

"It was a million-to-one accident. He was in a lot of pain and could have died," said George Beeken, who rushed to help Hill. "Getting gasoline out of a car that way is obviously not advisable," said a police officer. "Mr. Hill was lucky."

People make pets sick!

Letting your dog or cat sleep in your bed can pose a serious health hazard — for your pet.

Animals can catch diphtheria, tuberculosis, chicken pox and all sorts of other ailments from germ-spewing humans, Dr. Anton Mayr told a health forum in Dusseldorf, West Germany.

"The danger for the animal is far greater than for the owner," said the specialist.

"The human being is hardly ever in danger, but the dog or cat can be infected."

Kidnapped rabbit ransomed!

Three teenagers were arrested after cops said they demanded $50 ransom — for a rabbit.

Police were called after Michelle Rizzo, 4, found her pet rabbit, Smokey, missing from her parents' home in Kenilworth, N.J.

She found a note in the rabbit's box demanding $50 if she ever wanted to see it alive again.

The little girl's parents refused to pay the ransom.

Police found the rabbit under a railroad crossing sign behind the house.

Detective William Dowd photocopied the $50 bill and placed it in an envelope. Michelle left it under the railroad sign. Cops charged the teens with theft of the rabbit. They were released in the custody of their parents.

Bizarre story of love from beyond the grave

DEAD COUPLE WEDS!

Ghosts of sweethearts who died 15 years ago are married in church ceremony as 80 watch

Lovebirds Luen-Chow Chan and Ai-ling Li died days before they'd planned to be married. But years later, their ghosts strolled arm in arm into church — and tied the knot as 80 teary-eyed guests looked on.

"I knew it was weird, but it was such a wonderful wedding," gushed the groom's mother Mei

By JOE BERGER

My son's spirit has visited me night after night for years, begging me to arrange the marriage he and his girlfriend Ai-ling promised to be married. He promised me that he would look for them in all their lives and see them

Finally I said yes. I would do it so that they could at rest

The strange tale of love from beyond the grave began to unfold when [illegible] Luen-Chow Chan was killed [illegible] in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, at the age of 25. Ai-ling died in her hometown of Penang two weeks later at the age of 17

Mr. Ai-ling went with Mei and never came back said her still-grieving father Fatt "I think she wanted to be with her darling Luen-Chow

So she [illegible] to hear from the sixty-eyed sweetheart again. And so we did

For years, until Luen-Chow's [illegible] spirit visited [illegible] me at his widowed mom's home

I had never seen a ghost before but I knew the first time I saw him who he was and what he was," Mei Chan recalled. "He [illegible] I wasn't afraid because he was my twin

He kept running around and pleading with me to let them be married for eternity It was something I had to do so I started making plans for the ceremony."

When the big day came, scores of wide-eyed wedding guests showed up at a temple in Kuala Lumpur. Wondering whether the ghostly groom and his fiancee would actually pull off an appearance

Latecomers to the long-gone lovers were hung in front of the altar in case they didn't show up as Luen-Chow's mother had promised

But at the appointed hour, the two googly-eyed ghosts walked hand in hand into the holy place and said their vows before Priest Poon Tu-ming

"I was truly astonished when they arrived because I expected we would end up having a symbolic ceremony only," the priest told reporters. "When they came in in their flowing white robes, everyone was dumbfounded.

"Everybody sat in silence until the ceremony was over and then they rushed forward to congratulate the newlyweds — but Ai-ling and Luen-Chow just smiled and vanished

"I don't pretend to have an explanation for what happened. To me it is simply testimony to the power of God — and the power of love."

Crime queen's amazing spree

By JACK ALEXANDER

Sticky-fingered young mother-of-two Sharon Head helped herself to 281 custom-made luxury cars during a staggering four-year spree that included 2,257 crimes — an average of 11 a week.

The unchallenged crime queen stole $1.2 million worth of merchandise in the south of England before she was caught tucking a fedora in Ely.

Mrs. Head, 21, spent most of the money from the sale of stolen Ferraris, Porsches, Jaguars, Range Rovers and other goods on her son, 3, and daughter, 2. She said one $49,500 car for $450.

After stashing a 37-page confession of her incredibly heroic crimes, the judge who said, "The catalog of crimes you committed almost defies belief."

Mrs. Head pleaded guilty to nine charges including burglary, arson and theft. Her cops said she admitted 2,257 crimes between Jan. 1, 1984, and Nov. 26, 1987.

"I know that I will be a long time in prison and have a long time to sort everything out," said Mrs. Head, who became involved with a gang of crooks as a teenager.

"All I can say is that I am a very, very remorseful person and I wish I had never started. I am truly sorry and will not try a life of crime when I get out."

The amazing crime wonder was quizzed for 165 hours by cops who said only 125 of the 281 expensive cars — worth $450,000 — have been traced.

Mrs. Head's mind-boggling trail of crime came to an end when she was caught selling furs in a house she shared with a boyfriend after forging her husband and kids.

She gave police a phony name at first, but cops check their documents and found she was married to Mr. Head, 23, a [illegible] in Ely.

Prince Andy's wife sobs after catty fashion editor says:

SHE LOOKS LIKE A TANK!

NASTY fashion bigwigs in England have belittling poor Sarah Ferguson, Prince Andrew's wife. This last attack was the worst.

Prince Andrew's pregnant wife Sarah Ferguson was reportedly sobbing after another vicious, cruel attack on her lumpy looks by a London newspaper.

Ever since they wed, Fergie's been the target of "fat" jokes by the often acid-tongued English press which seems to delight in bashing the royal gal over her full-figured look and choice of clothes.

Now the catty fashion editor of the London Daily Telegraph got after Fergie for not wearing puffy maternity clothes to hide her ballooning body.

"What's happened to her is that while she hasn't gotten much of a bulge, she doesn't realize how much broader she has gotten in her hips," wrote Kathryn Samuel, fashion editor, for her opinion. But sources say her brutal words stung poor Fergie who has been trying to go about her business of carrying the upcoming new royal without bothering anyone.

Sources report the poor mom-to-be was near tears after the vicious fat attack.

"No woman who is in the public eye could take to the palace. "This attack on a pregnant lady is especially vicious.

ANNOUNCEMENT: Now available in English – the amazing Dennis Rousseau diet that has worked weight-loss wonders for over 400,000 satisfied men and women in France, Italy, West Germany, Norway, Belgium, Switzerland, Brazil, Argentina, Canada, and USA. See coupon below for details of free 90-day trial and money-back guarantee.

"Here is my incredible secret for losing weight!"

Thanks to the discovery of two doctors, I lost 118 pounds by eating 5 meals per day (one of which is a whole chicken for dinner)

Now you can lose weight by eating all you want—and as much as you want. No medicines to take. No starvation diet. Here is the secret—absolutely at no risk.

Famous French singer and TV star Dennis Rousseau just lost 118 pounds (4 pounds per week) by eating five meals a day—one of which was a whole chicken for dinner.

His secret: dissociated foods.

You can eat as much as you want, all you want. The only restriction: you cannot eat certain foods together during the course of the same meal.

For example: you can eat a steak as large as you want with as many green vegetables as you want (but you cannot, during the course of the same meal, add bread (or French fries).

That is why Dennis Rousseau eats five meals a day and never gets hungry. He can eat everything: bread, pasta, fruits, desserts—and as much as he wants (for example, large quantities of chicken and a whole fish)!

How is this done?

Thanks to the discovery of two European doctors, we know today that in order to be able to lose fat, certain foods must be combined together in our body.

For example, everyone knows that butter makes a person fat. But you can eat a lot of butter during the same meal without gaining weight at all if you eat no bread at the same time, and abstain from certain other foods—which Dennis Rousseau will identify for you in his book (which you can read and try entirely at our risk).

Obviously, you are not compelled to eat five meals a day. You probably do not have the enormous appetite of Dennis Rousseau. And you probably do not have to lose 118 pounds. Therefore, it is not necessary for you to eat five meals a day. If you don't want to. On the contrary, it is indispensable, if you want to lose 3½ to 4½ pounds a week, not to eat certain foods during the same meal.

What are these foods which you MUST NOT eat during the same meal? Dennis Rousseau's book—written in collaboration with expert dietitians Veronique Sklarenska—tells you:

1) All foods from fat which you eat them together during the same meal. (And which you must therefore avoid.)

2) All foods which do not harm fat when you eat them together during the course of the same meal and which can therefore be eaten at will.

Other revelations

In his book, Dennis Rousseau tells you:

- Why you must drink water every half-hour.
- The magic power of certain vegetables for your health.
- How to eliminate cellulite and prevent it from forming.

- Extraordinary recipes which make you lose weight while you eat like a king. Such as the famous "chicken salad Dennis Rousseau," some sirloin with leek, carrots of spinach with fresh vegetables, mushrooms sautéed, etc. (52 recipes in all).
- The references of certain herbs to help you lose weight quickly.
- And, above all, how to remain thin. The keys and extraordinary revelations of Dennis Rousseau (which you will not find elsewhere).

Here is my proposal:

Read and try the advice of Dennis Rousseau and Veronique Sklarenska completely at our risk and without any obligation on your part. If you do not lose at least 3½ pounds per week, and as early as the first week, return his book before three WEEKS and I will send you a check for $18.90 no later than 5 days after receipt of your package. That is without asking you any questions—you can see risk by making this test!

Read this only if you hesitate to accept our offer.

1. This book is free and without obligation. You pay $39.40 only if you lose at least 3½ pounds per week. And you are the sole judge.

2. You eat as much as you want and all you want. The only restriction: not to eat together, during the course of the same meal, the foods which Dennis Rousseau will point out to you.

3. IT WORKS! You can see by looking at Dennis Rousseau personally (120 pounds and today 121 pounds).

4. You will be full of energy. This is an extra gift which dissociated foods give you.

5. When you no longer have to carry around extra pounds, you will feel better. You will be healthier, and therefore more beautiful. Many seductive "no" will be more pleasing. A new life will begin for you.

HAPPY housewife Kay Benson says, going with her big brood of kids

By SUSAN DAVISON

Mooresville Kay Benson works long hours caring for her unemployed family of 14 kids — and she loves every minute of it!

Even though she has to start her day at 4:30 a.m. to keep up with her markedly absent, she tremendously supervisors wouldn't trade places with anyone.

"I feel like I really am important to the house," said Kay, 40, whose children range in age from 1 to 16. "And I do believe women are the heart of the home."

Kay and her husband Jim waited three years after their marriage to have their first baby. After that they've had a baby a year. Jim supports the entire brood on his $43,000 salary he makes as a telephone company employee.

But despite the expense and the commotion of the large family, Kay treasures her days.

"You have to have confidence in yourself," Kay said, showing the secret of her success as a mom. "Jim says all the time 'Honey, if we didn't laugh, we'd cry. We'd better laugh.' Lord knows we have our problems.

"But I'm not a discouraged-type person — there couldn't be always have little kids around and how else anyone get depressed with little kids around?"

SHROUD OF TURIN MYSTERY SOLVED

By RAGAN DUNN

The Shroud of Turin is the creation of a 14th century herbalist who wanted to glorify God!

That is the mind-blowing claim of French historian Paul Vignon, who says a recently discovered book by Jacques de Vitral inside the Shroud did it.

"I wish I could tell you that the Shroud of Christ is a burial cloth, but I can't because it is not," said Dr Vignon. "That's not to say that it is not sacred.

"The fact that the Shroud has been preserved and venerated for 600 years is proof that it was of whole (holy)."

Dr Vignon's statement has raised a storm of controversy in Christendom. Previous theories supported his claim with a 600 year old book written by Vital himself.

The text tells the Oglesheim artist and herbalist the young heroine Sally allegedly paid to make the Shroud after God appeared to him in a vision in 1349.

"Vital felt strongly that God wanted him to create a picture for religious worship," said Dr Vignon. "In a burst of inspiration, he showed a duplicate of blood over a bearded master

Owner's home is where her buffalo roams

At a ranch near Clark, Wyo., a buffalo used to roam among the hogs — and still tries to.

"She thinks she's a person," said rancher Martin Zimmer, who has raised Greta the buffalo since she was a baby.

Greta had the run of the house until she began ramming up parts, demanding to be fed. When Zimmer moved her outside, she knocked on the door with her horns to get back in.

Zimmer made a pet out of the baby bison when she was abandoned by her mother. She weighed 50 pounds at first, but now tips the scales at 700 pounds, she will weigh 1,200 when full grown.

Veggie-hating children run cancer risk, say researchers

Kids who turn up their noses at veggies run a greater risk of suffering colon cancer when they grow up, according to the latest research.

"Switching to a better diet later in life was advantageous, but we didn't learn if that can entirely overcome the effects of a poor diet early in childhood," said Theresa Young, a University of Wisconsin researcher.

The study found that children who ate a lot of junk food had a high risk of developing colon cancer later in life. But diets that include peanut butter, milk, cheese, broiled foods and vegetables appeared to protect people from the disease.

Carnival couple wait for the stork

Rubber man and 3-armed lady expecting bouncing baby boy

By KEVIN FISHER

A carnival's rubber man and three-armed lady gal married and now they're expecting a baby boy!

The couple say they couldn't be happier, but at least one doctor is afraid they'll give birth to a monster.

"I certainly don't want to denigrate these people but let's face it, they aren't what you call the ideal couple," Dr. Franz Chevalier told reporters in Vienna, Austria. "They might surprise everyone and have a normal baby.

"But judging from the genes that made them what they are, you'd certainly have to say the odds were against it."

In fact, Paul Pilet and his new bride Rachel, both 36, didn't set out to have a child or even after their wedding and even contemplated having an abortion, said newspapers.

They later decided that the child had a right to life and vowed to have it no matter what.

They even had a test that said female sat they're expecting a boy.

"It doesn't matter if our baby is beautiful or not," said Mrs. Pilet, who has a spare arm on her back. "We have lots of love to give to him and that's more important than what he looks like."

Pilet himself has also that stretches like warm rubber. He added: "Children are born to drug addicts and criminals every single day.

friends and a decent place to live."

Public reaction to Mrs. Pilet's pregnancy was mixed. But one survey indicated that people approved of it by a margin of almost three to one, newspapers said. "I do wish them the best," said Dr. Chevalier.

"And my prayers are certainly with them."

Dog drowns its [redacted] as she tries to rescue him

A woman who fell into the water trying to save her dog after it fell off her boat drowned when the terrified animal pushed her under.

Eunice Horton, 58, of New Smyrna Beach, Fla., died after her husband Roger, 61, and a Coast Guard rescue team failed to revive her. The dog survived.

the Intracoastal Waterway and Mrs. Horton reached over to try to grab the dog. But she lost her balance and fell into the water, striking her head on a dinghy tied to the larger boat.

"The dog, a Labrador retriever, was all over Mrs. Horton pushing her down," said Petty Officer Luis Diaz.

Parents charged with child abuse after cops say . . .

Boy, 8, held prisoner in a bathroom for 4 years!

By PETE COOKE

Horrified cops said an 8-year-old boy weighing just 25 pounds escaped through the window of a bathroom where his parents had kept him prisoner for four years!

"This kid was treated worse than an animal," said Houston, Tex., police Sgt. William Stacey. "He didn't even know how old he was. Everyone hated him so they never celebrated his birthday. The kid thought he was 5 years old and he looks 3 years old."

Stacey said the boy, Vanroy Jimenez, is 8½ years old, but stood only 2-foot-3 and weighed 25 pounds when he managed to escape through the bathroom window of his parents' apartment.

"It's a classic case of child neglect in that basically it was an unwanted, unloved child forced to live its life in the family bathroom," Sgt. Stacey said. "The child slept on the floor and was given one meal a day, which is obviously not enough."

"He drank water from the toilet when he was thirsty and he would eat dog food," an investigator said.

"He said he just couldn't stand it anymore and that he wanted to go outside."

After his escape, Vanroy ran to a nearby gas station where startled employees immediately called authorities.

The little boy told the first officer to arrive, "I don't like Mommy and Daddy. Please don't take me back."

Vanroy's father, Alexander Jimenez, a 38-year-old chef in a seafood restaurant, and his mother, Charlotte Jimenez, 42, were charged with causing injury to a child. The felony carries a maximum possible sentence of life in prison.

Other children in the family, a 10-year-old girl, an 11-year-old boy and Vanroy's twin sister, apparently suffered no abuse. Sgt. Stacey said Vanroy's mother was particularly good to them.

"She was usually the only one he had contact with," he said. "When was the one who fed him with a ball and told him what a bad boy he was." Authorities said neighbors did not even know Vanroy existed and the boy never went to school.

"He basically learned how to talk by hearing other people talking while he listened through the bathroom door," Sgt. Stacey said.

Vanroy and the other children in the family were later placed in foster homes. During a court appearance a prosecutor said he overheard Jimenez wonder aloud, "So what's the fuss all about?" Jimenez and his wife denied the charges.

LITTLE Vanroy Jimenez is 8 years old but looks like a boy 3. The boy weighed only 25 pounds when he escaped.

Gifts of love pour in for tragic little boy

Americans have opened their hearts and purses for little Vanroy Jimenez, sending cash, clothes and words of encouragement to let him know they care and speed his recovery.

"This is very unusual," said Gene Daniel, director of Harris County Protective Services, Houston, Tex., the agency responding from all over the country with gifts for the boy.

"People have been calling us offering clothes, food and money for the child. People cannot comprehend that a parent can lock a child up or separate him from the rest of the family. I think that breaks your heart."

Vanroy is in good condition and is expected to be released from the hospital soon. He is undergoing psychological counseling and rehabilitation and appears to be well on his way to a full recovery, said officials.

Daniel said his agency has a fund to help take care of children like Jimenez. If you'd like to help, call Harris County Children's Protective Services, Houston, Tex., for more information.

Honest gal makes pal a $56 winner

Theresa Earnest proved to be one honest gal when she returned a $5,000 instant win prize ticket to her friend Bernadette Barber.

The game ticket was included in the lunch Theresa picked up for Bernadette from a fast-food restaurant. On her way back to work and to deliver the lunch, Theresa couldn't resist the temptation to see what was on the ticket in Bernadette's lunch.

She was stunned when she realized her friend had won the $5,000 prize. For a moment, the Newport News, Va., woman was tempted to keep the ticket for herself.

But she hopefully slipped the ticket back in the lunch.

"I would have had to live with it for the rest of my life," said Theresa.

Gal couldn't be a cop so she became a . . .

Squad car thief!

By JACK ALEXANDER

Housewife Patricia Elliott never realized her life's dream of becoming a cop became of one tiny little quirk. She was a crook — who stole police cruisers.

She swiped a cop car every few weeks and cruised around Colorado Springs, Colo. She even registered the police department as her car radio when she was busted.

One such call proved to be her undoing. Mrs. Elliott, 36, was arrested the next day. She cut one officer with a screwdriver when they came to get her.

The would-be woman cop pleaded guilty to car theft and assault.

She was sentenced to eight years in prison and likely will serve four of them.

"I always wanted to be a cop. I was 14 when I first got the itch. My uncle was an FBI agent," she said shortly after her arrest.

At 18, she became a shoplifter's rookie. Later, although married with a baby, Mrs. Elliott applied for admission to the police academy but was turned down.

Disappointed at her failure, she took an overdose of pills. Her hubby called police. She helped set one of them with a knife and was given a psychiatric examination. A month later she was driving home after a few drinks with friends.

"I drove past the sheriff's department and saw all those beautiful police cars parked in neat rows," said Mrs. Elliott.

"I remembered I had a pot of blister keys a deputy had dropped in the house that time I tried to kill myself.

"I wondered what it was like to be behind the wheel of a patrol car. The next thing I knew, I was cruising down the highway. I had such a sense of freedom and power. People would stop speaking when they saw me."

She went joyriding in cop cruisers several other times. The police usually caught her within minutes. Often she abandoned the car with keys, a throwback of the Lizzie Borden days.

After the arrest when she cut a cop, police found $10,000 worth of automatic in her home — bullets, bullhorns and an arsenal of cop gear.

That was her ninth arrest. She had tucked out earlier with fines and probation.

HOUSEWIFE Patricia Elliott faces eight years in prison.

SHINY police cruisers like this one were too great a temptation for housewife Patricia Elliott — she'd steal the squad cars just for the heck of it.

She stole my heart and stomped off over it

Dear Dotti: This wonderful lady rented the condo next to mine. She's a lovely looking 70. Although she always has time for her age. She knows every angle there is to make me fall in love with her. She made me feel like I was the only man in the world for her.

But what it is she's a very conniving liar. She has set up shop on the same floor, always a few hundred miles apart. She says she's flying away to visit her children, but [illegible], she's off spending a week with another old fool. It hurts me so much knowing she's been with another man.

Should I keep going with her and hope the old phrase will settle down eventually? — Bleeding Heart, Florida

Dear Bleeding Heart: If your age and hers don't matter, you'd better settle for what's offered, especially since she's a lawyer.

My guy's a bum but I love him

Dear Dotti: I want to settle down with this guy, and he keeps asking me when we are going to get a piece of the pie.

I told him we'd get a piece when he gets a job like mine. Trouble, though, is that he's not trying to find one. He wants me to work two jobs. What should I do — drop him or what? — Phoenix, Ariz.

Dear Phoenix: Give the guy the gate until he gives you a weekly paycheck that covers the rent, lights, phone and food — and maybe a movie.

He's a cheater and I can't trust him

Dear Dotti: During our courtship, my fiancé had a hot thing with a redhead who flirted and stared me down when she saw our engagement in the paper. She stole my ring and refused to give it back when I broke up with her when she called and said she didn't want me to go through with the wedding.

I didn't know what to do as my wedding was such a fiasco after with all the plans made and paid for. I got married anyway, six months ago. Now I don't trust my husband and have kicked him out a few times.

I guess that he loves that girl. What am I to do? Part of me wants to let him go to her but the cheated I say hope he's happy. — Little Girl, Illinois

Dear Little Girl: Sure you don't have to be trouble-making little youngun, call your wedding off and all the wedding gifts and start dating again.

I'm a love-aholic and it scares guys

Dear Dotti: When I meet ladies, I fall in love with them — feel that it would work out. I guess the reason I do that is that I don't want them to leave so I tell them I love them.

I dated one lady and up the [illegible] to marry me. We did it one week later. Now I'm divorced.

What do I do to find someone to love me? — Lonely and Blue, Utah

Dear Lonely: Join a health club and give the cheerleaders a buddy of your choice get someone to become a Dotti all your own if you start hyperventilating before you've dated her for six months.

How can I help my false friend?

Dear Dotti: A girl I work with is miserable over a boyfriend who she's always searching parties and rendezvous.

At lunch she confides in me hoping down the other to see how much she can stuff her self with.

I didn't realize how fat she was getting until I went into the women's room the other day.

She took off her jacket and I realized before her huge midriff bulge — and one of the most fattening girdles I've ever seen didn't help a bit!

I know this is her fault, but should I try to help her? — Working Buddy, New York

Dear Working Buddy: Don't eat. She's handling her hearts out. She'll lose weight when she gets over him.

Auctioning off that baby was really an act of love

Address your letters to Editors, Weekly World News, 600 South East Coast Ave., Lantana, FL 33462. We reserve the right to edit your letters.

Editors: Sometimes you have a pretty good paper but sometimes you really go off half-cocked. For example, you were in full of outrage when you reported the June 7 story about the mother who auctioned off her baby girl to the highest bidder.

That shows me you're not as smart as you think. Certainly that woman wasn't the ideal mother but she probably did her baby a big favor.

I myself was born to a poor, unwed mother who was forced to put me up for adoption right after birth. I was adopted and raised by kind, loving parents who gave me a much better life than my natural mother could have hoped to do. I knew placing me up for adoption was an act of love.

In the 25 years since then, I've been an Eagle Scout and now I'm getting my master's degree in English literature.

You tell me I've turned out just fine, so don't get all huffy when some poor mom like Maria Cecilia does what she has to do. — B.K., Madison, Wis.

Maybe you're just fine and maybe you aren't. If you can't see the difference between putting a child up for adoption and auctioning a baby off to strangers to make a fast buck, you still have a lot of room for improvement. — Editors

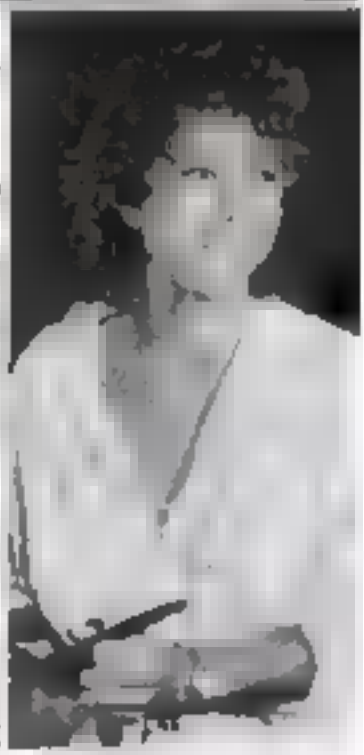
Kristy topless? Say it isn't so

Editors: I was heartsick when I read that adorable Kristy McNichol was going to be running around topless in her new movie.

Kristy is the only actress I've ever seen who can be sexy and cute at the same time. She's a natural beauty and she doesn't need to take off her clothes to get noticed.

Please tell me it isn't so. — Jeff, Boston, Mass.

Dear Jeff: Sorry to disappoint you, but Kristy's decision to bare all in the movie "Private Lessons" was her own. She's a grown woman and she doesn't think she has to be a prude.



WILL Kristy McNichol's new movie spoil her squeaky clean image?

MILO'S just like a big old teddy bear in the arms of his adoring owner, Deborah La Tempa, who got him as a gift

MEET ... the h who thi he's a d

By JOE BERGER

Wily ol' Milo could be the perfect pooch. He's cute, he's cuddly, the kids can ride him like a horse and his bark is always worse than his bite.

Thing is, Milo's not a mutt — he's a hog who thinks he's a dog!

And a sweetheart of a swine he is, too.

"Milo is wonderful — he's absolutely the perfect pet," says starstruck animal lover Deborah La Tempa.

"He has his own special personality and he's so darling you just can't help loving him."

Delighted Deborah got the 4-foot Chinese potbellied pig as a gift from buddy Vic last Christmas and he quickly became a hit with their future Scottsdale, Ariz., household — including Rodney, 9, and Sebastian, 18 months.

At first the family's two shows tried to acclimatize the adorable animal. When that failed, the layout of their bungalow fast changed.

Now many Milo eats with the dogs, plays with the dogs and sleeps with the dogs in a big pile on the La Tempas' floor. He even wags his tail.

"When he runs with the others, he barks just like they do," Deborah said. "I really believe he thinks he is a dog. He's just like them."

Well, not quite.

"He needs more stimulation than the dogs," says Vic. "He's even figured out how to slide open the screen door. They haven't figured out how to do that.

"He's smarter than the dogs, much more than a cat and very gentle with the children."

For sunbathing Milo has heaven to daring. On any day on the hall carpet or scrounging on the mountain rug in the playhouse he remains diverted from the kids.

But make no mistake — this boar is no fool.

"He wants attention all the time," said devoted Deborah. "He'll roll over and close his eyes to get me to pet him."

And this pig is not above making a pest of himself.

"He loves chocolate chip cookies but we haven't found anything he won't eat," Deborah said. "We have to watch him to make sure he doesn't eat himself to death.

"He eats my houseplants and once he got into some dog biscuits and gobbled four pounds of them in 10 minutes.

"The photographer took some pictures of Milo and sent us some prints and Milo ate them. And the other day he ate my TV Guide."

The La Tempa kids have a special fondness for the playful pitcher, and the feeling is obviously mutual.

Patient dies as doc takes coffee break

A doctor who decided to take a coffee break while his patient was lying on an operating table in the middle of surgery may face criminal charges after the patient slipped into a coma and died.

British officials are investigating Dr. John Adamaka following the death of Alan Loveland, who lapsed into a coma during routine eye surgery in Croydon, England. The 34-year-old patient never regained consciousness.

According to testimony at an inquest, Dr. Adamaka, an anesthetist, left the operating room while Loveland was undergoing surgery for a detached retina.

While Dr. Adamaka was out having coffee, the patient's blood pressure fell dangerously low and he may have been without Shocked police eyewitness confirms . . .

Drowning child saved by mom's ghost

By RAGAN QUINN

Paramedics and policemen watched in shock and disbelief as a mother's ghost reached from beyond the grave — to save the life of her drowning child!

"I saw it with my own eyes and I still have trouble believing it," Police Lt. Erik Bonde told reporters in Kolding, Denmark.

"The apparition simply appeared and lifted that child off the bottom of a lake. I still pinch myself when I think about it.

"The ghost actually had to give the child artificial respiration to bring her back to life."

Newspapers said the drama unfolded a few minutes after Inger Gruppen, 6, fell out of her father's boat while they were fishing on a lake near Kolding.

Vald Gruppen, 38, can't swim. And by the time he untangled a lifeline and tossed it in the water, his daughter had disappeared.

"He alerted us by radio and we had shore policemen and paramedics out after them in seconds," said Lt. Bonde.

"We were 50, maybe 60 yards away when we saw this ghost, this female specter, appeared over Mr. Gruppen's boat. As we got closer he grew frantic and waved us back.

"He said, 'My wife is here. She'll save Inger.' And I'll be damned if he wasn't right."

According to the cop, the pale white ghost of Helga Gruppen, who died in a car crash last year, dove underwater and emerged with the limp body of her daughter in her arms. The spectre seemed to float over to the Gruppen boat, he added. Once there, it put the girl down and performed artificial respiration.

Then it kissed her on the forehead and disappeared, he said.

Loving spirit gives daughter breath of life

LITTLE Inger Gruppen was rescued by the ghost of her mother Helga in an amazing example of love beyond the grave. Police Lt. Erik Bonde, who was an eyewitness to the startling encounter, said the child received artificial respiration from the spirit. "I saw it with my own eyes," said Bonde.

LIFESAVING Dr. Alejandro Bernstein with shackled mom Marsha Dorgan-Carpenter and patient Rusty.

SUPER SURGEON SAVES BOY WITH CRAZY GLUE

By LAURA MYERS

Courageous 8-year-old Rusty Dorgan-Carpenter was prepared to die until a crafty doctor saved his life with tubes of Crazy Glue!

"If it hadn't been for the use of Crazy Glue, he would not be living now," said 36-year-old devoted mom Marsha. "Rusty could have bled to death."

Rusty's dedicated doc, Dr. Alejandro Bernstein, a New York University Medical Center surgeon, saved his young patient's life by using the super-sticky substance to seal off blood vessels in a liver tumor on Rusty's neck.

The technique enabled Dr. Bernstein to prevent Rusty's damaged blood vessels from soaking up essential blood cells "like a sponge."

"If there was anyone in the world who could help us, it was him," said the mom.

Rusty spent his eighth birthday at Sea World in Orlando, Fla., courtesy of the Make a Wish Foundation, which provides terminally ill youngsters with special wishes. He had a lovely time," gushed Marsha.

Amazingly, the youngster has healthy twin sisters, Michelle and Megan, 7, born exactly one year earlier.

Suspect escapes jail & robs bank again, say police

A man arrested for robbing a bank, escaped from jail and fled back to the same bank and robbed the same teller again, say cops.

The bank teller in New Bedford, Mass., recognized the man, according to police.

"I want you to help me again," the suspect told the teller. When she replied, "No," the bandit replied, "I have a gun. Don't make me use it."

The teller handed over the money and the robber fled.

Tipsy miner goes out with a . . .

BANG!

He stuck a stick of dynamite between his legs — and lit the fuse, say cops

By JOE BAGOT

Boozy bachelor Tony Panaet got so plastered one night that he stuck a stick of dynamite between his legs, lit the fuse — and blew himself to smithereens!

Tipsy Tony, 30, had just staggered home from a two-day bout with the bottle when the explosion shattered window, ripped a hole in his roof and shook nearby homes in Swansea, Wales.

The part-time coal miner was alone at the time of the blast, but disconsolate drinking buddies say they realize it was the result of a stunt that blew up in his face.

"Tony loved to play with dynamite," pal Pete Thomas told reporters. "He'd get tanked — I mean pub and top it off by lighting a stick between his legs. Then he'd scuff it out just moments before it blew.

"That always made me the center of attention — and usually got him back in the pub."

Grieving Pete thinks Tony was practicing his stunt at home and was too pickled to get rid the fuse in time.

And medical investigators say damage to the bathroom ceiling indicates the dynamite was between the victim's legs when it went off.

"He was a great bloke, but he liked to get drunk — and when he did, he got absolutely and totally legless," said tank-up Tony's boss, mine owner John Price.

A barmaid at the local Farmer's Arms pub said when Tony dropped by he usually got away about 10 pints of beer and eight or nine shots of whiskey before turning out the door.

"He was a main customer for trouble," she said. "What happened is a pity but nobody is truly surprised."

Jug of water starts blaze

A housewife accidentally started a fire in her home — with a jug of water!

Yong Kim, who lives in Haverhill, Mass. said she left the jug full of water she had used for steaming on the back porch of her home. Sunlight shining through the jug was magnified by the water and became so strong that it started a blaze on the outside wall of her house. Neighbors noticed the fire and called fire fighters, who put out the blaze after it had destroyed about $2,000 worth of damage to Mrs. Kim's home.

Creep mugs bashful boxer

Tasha — a powerfully built 50-pound pooch who acted more like a pussycat when a robber grabbed a rubber ball and $1.20 right out of her mouth. The scrappy 3-year-old boxer dog was mugged by a young man as she carried the ball and money in a plastic bag in her mouth. Tasha's owner, Karen Vasper, had put $5 in a pouch in the dog's collar, then phoned a pal store to say Tasha would drop by to pick up a rubber ball. The hapless canine was returning home the pet store in the owner's office with the ball and change from the $5 when a man snatched the bag from her mouth and ran. "I was shocked that they would stop a dog like that," said Miss Vasper of Kingston, Canada.

Rare pups get huffy at the fair

Two frisky Shar-Peis — one who appeared on Hill Street Blues — have been shot and killed by police in Hutchinson, Kans.

Police shot the two pups, Tubby and Dargan, valued at $3,000, after the animals roamed freely on the fairgrounds.

Authorities said that the canines threatened people for one hour.

Sneaky thief smashes principal's crash [illegible]

By RAFE KLINGER

Principal Mike Kerner's plan to teach students about safe driving by placing a mangled wreck in front of the school backfired — when someone stole the radio out of the crashed car.

"It's kind of a tragedy — a sad commentary on our society," Kerner, principal of Linden (Mich.) High School, told The NEWS.

"There's no way of telling who stole the radio. Obviously, the easiest conclusion to make is that it was one of my kids. I don't think it was."

The twisted wreck belonged to 17-year-old Linden High student Lisa Sherman. She ended up with a broken leg, wrist and arm after her car went off the road at a curve, slid into a ravine and smashed through some trees, Kerner said.

As a lesson and warning to the other 750 students at Linden High, Kerner got permission from the girl's parents to tow the wrecked car to the school and leave it out in front.

"It's been dark before in the country," he explained. "It's kind of a message to drive safely. Kids don't understand that cars can be a lethal weapon."

Unfortunately, someone missed the point of Kerner's lesson.

Overnight, a vandal slipped up to the wreck and made off with the radio. Kerner had the car removed the next day before any more damage was done.

"If it hadn't been broken into, it would have stayed there until the end of the school year (about 6 weeks)," he said.

"I think the short time it was here it served its purpose."

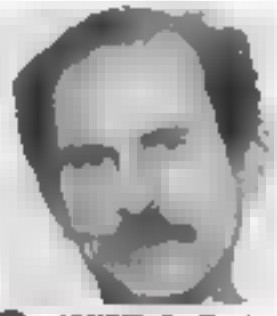
Doc gave his wife abortion against her will, say police



ACCUSED: Dr. Theodor Lehrer denies performing the abortion on his wife.

By JACK ALEXANDER

A doctor is accused of giving his screaming wife an abortion in their apartment without anesthesia — and against her will.

Dr. Theodor Lehrer, 53, was arrested by Fort Lauderdale, Fla., cops after his wife claimed she was handcuffed, strapped to a table and raped before the abortion.

Mrs. Lehrer claims her hubby was angry because she refused to have sex with him due to sickness associated with her pregnancy.

"He's accused of inserting an object into the woman and aborting an 11- to 14-week embryo against her will," said police spokesman Gil Cefkin.

Lehrer, who operates an abortion clinic, has not commented on his wife's charges. He was released from jail on $60,000 bond after being charged with one count of kidnapping and two counts of sexual battery.

In a statement filed in court, the woman claims:

She was reading in her bedroom when she was handcuffed, dragged into a bathroom by her husband and strapped to a portable table.

The 37-year-old woman, thought her husband — a father of two — was going to rape her, but then he started her baby, she said. Lehrer told her he was giving her a local anesthetic but she felt no injection — only excruciating pain, she said.

The doctor later told police he tied his wife's hands and had sex with her, but denied performing an abortion, according to a court document.

Mrs. Lehrer called police after the [illegible] pregnant and that an abortion operation had reported what had been performed.

"[illegible] rape," said Judge J. Bart Rudnick.

Bowlers keep rolling past man in gutter

It was play ball as usual for pin knockers at Mission Bowl despite the fact that John Johnson was laying facedown in his own blood between two of the lanes.

"All around the victim were numerous people," a police report stated. "They were walking around him and some were even stepping over him."

Johnson reportedly had been drunk, picking fights and dishing out racial slurs, witnesses said.

Between bowling down pins, Johnson grabbed a man who punched him in the nose. Johnson was treated in La Jolla for a broken nose and skull fracture.

Mean fish gives girl nasty bite

Eleven-year-old Cheryl-Ann Cavanaugh thought she was safe from dangerous underwater creatures when she went swimming in a small lake in Ontario, Canada.

But the girl was attacked and severely bitten — by an ordinary variety of pike!

The girl's leg was "bleeding and all chewed up," according to the Recreational Angler, a publication of the International Game Fish Association.

Cheryl-Ann grabbed the side of her uncle's boat and was pulled out of the water. The pound-to-her leg measured 11 inches.

Cruel cut

Manuel Pinho Pardal got too close to a hedge trimmer and watched in horror as it sliced off his penis.

Surgeons in Portugal rushed the man into emergency surgery and were able to sew the organ back on. After the operation, Pardal said, "I'm feeling fine."

Accidental Discovery May End Obesity

Special to the Enquirer

SWEDEN — Medical researchers at the University of Kuopio in Finland, have discovered (accidentally) a new weight loss formula. The new discovery enables an overweight individual to lose pounds and keep them off without dieting or exercise.

Scientists made the discovery while searching for a formula to lower cholesterol. In a study of a test group, cholesterol levels dropped an average of 60 points per person, and not only that, but the individuals lost weight. The published report of the study stated "A highly significant decrease in body weight was seen" in patients who received the formula.

The formula was then tested at Sahlgrenska Hospital, University of Goteborg, Again, all patients had a substantial amount of weight even though they did not change their eating habits. The report detailing this study published in the British Journal of Nutrition, stated "Body weight was significantly reduced more than the patients were specifically asked to do so, and their dietary habits." One patient in the study lost more than 30 pounds.

According to the published report, the active ingredient comes from a little-known botanical source and contains no drugs or stimulants. When taken before meals over a period of time, the user can eat "their fill" without overeating their allowance.

A significant percent of the calories ingested thereafter pass through the digestive system undigested. The result has to get energy to replace the lost calories, so it starts burning stored fat. The result is rapid body weight loss. Extensive clinical tests have verified the safety of the formula for long-term use.

The formula is marketed in tablet form in the United States under the trade name Cal-Ban 3000. A firm located in Tampa, Florida, has exclusive North American distribution rights. A number of companies that received hundreds of people who have lost up to 10 pounds the first week and as much as 30, 40 or 50 or more pounds overall with Cal-Ban 3000. There is a golden opportunity for people who are plagued by fat and cellulite that don't seem to bear by conventional methods.

Cal-Ban 3000 is now readily available at $19.95 for a 3-week supply and $34.95 for a 6-week supply. Postage and handling is $3. To accept delivery service, orders are accepted by toll free phone only. VISA, MasterCard, American Express and C.O.D. orders are accepted. C.O.D.'s are $2.00 extra. Orders may be placed by calling Anderson Pharmacals TOLL-FREE 1-800-228-3111. During this special phone only promotion purchasers of a six week supply of Cal-Ban 3000 will receive, absolutely free, a beautiful 24" double strand necklace of sparkling Chinese Fresh pearls.

Call today to begin the pleasant transformation from fat and flab to the slender, trim body you want. If you fail to achieve a proper weight loss you may return the empty bottle for a 100% refund.

Jilted gal makes 4,000 crank calls in 10 days!

By IRWIN FISHER

A woman hit back at the boyfriend who ditched her and pestered his new gal with 4,000 crank telephone calls — in 10 days!

"It was just an unbelievable act of revenge," police Lt. Gabriel Vidal told reporters in Anne, France.

She telephoned her victim at all hours of the day and night and hung up when she answered. If you average it out, she dialed once about every 3½ minutes."

Catherine Poulain, 31, was charged in the harassment of Michelle Gimel after her arrest at her apartment near Anne, and the cop.

Miss Gimel, 27, said she was a nervous wreck before the ordeal ended — but there was nothing she could do to stop it.

"My mother is in very poor health and lives in another city," she explained. "There's nobody to take care of her so she calls me two or three times a day for comfort.

"That's why I couldn't take the receiver off the hook. And the telephone company told me it would take at least four weeks to have my number changed."

Because the calls were short, police found it almost impossible to trace them to Miss Poulain.

They finally did by having Mark Barette, her former boyfriend, answer the telephone for Miss Gimel.

"I kept her on the line by pretending to go out with her again," said the 34-year-old salesman.

"She was still talking when police dragged her out of her apartment."

Classified documents reveal they landed on Earth in 1947!

By HENRY WIRZ

A German researcher says as many as 1,700 Martians are living in an underground city in central Brazil!

1,700 Martians living in secret underground city!

U.S. govt. set them up in Brazilian jungle

"I'm not talking about a secret UFO base — this is a specially designed city that has been sanctioned and supplied by the Brazilian government since the 1940s," Dr. Raimund Morlau told reporters.

"The United States government is fully aware of it," he added. "American officials persuaded the Brazilians to accept the Martians when they came here in 1947."

Dr. Morlau's claim, though fantastic, is supported by a mounting body of evidence that has only recently been uncovered.

Classified documents obtained from a Brazilian military source reportedly specify that the city is located under a 2,000-acre parcel in central Brazil.

Even more astonishing, they say that the city is populated by approximately 1,700 Martians who fled their own planet when a lethal virus threatened to wipe out their entire race.

"The documents say the Martians have always lived in subterranean cities because they are ultrasensitive to sunlight," said Dr. Morlau.

"The rash of UFO sightings reported worldwide in the mid-1940s would certainly seem to bear out the fact that they migrated to Earth at that time," he added.

"According to the sources, they contacted American officials upon their arrival and arrangements were made to house them in Brazil."

Portions of the documents have been blotted out. They do say that the underground city is protected by a force field designed by the Martians.

They also make it clear that the Martians agreed to remain underground and not enter society at large.

Government spokesmen appeared to be very visibly shaken when quizzed by reporters and would neither confirm nor deny the subject's report.

Fernando Passos, who heads up the UFO study group, RT, was also shaken — and demanded that American and Brazilian officials "tell the public everything that they know right now.

"The very least they could do is provide us with a description of the aliens so we could protect ourselves if they escape," he said.

"These aliens obviously possess a super technology to have gotten to Earth in the 1940s. Who knows what they might do if they get tired of living in such a cramped place?"

OBJECT Howard Gribble got shock when it landed in his neighbor's garden

Jet's door falls into gardener's pea patch

The door of a high-flying jumbo jet literally popped off the plane and plunged to earth — landing smack in the middle of Leslie Taylor's garden!

"It's incredible that no one was hurt," said Taylor, 43, of Southbourne Close, England. "My son often plays in that very spot."

neighbor was actually sitting in his yard when the 66-pound door fell off a Boeing 727 on its approach to London's Heathrow Airport.

He said: "I saw something fall. At first, it looked like a bit of paper because it was fluttering. But after a few seconds I realized it was some coming down fast. It must have taken about 30 seconds to reach the ground."

An airline spokesman said the plane was never in danger and landed normally in spite of losing the door. The fittings that secured the door appear to have been sheared off, he added. But — for engineers

Electric fence kills lady trying to save her dog

An elderly spinster tried to rescue her beloved pet dog and was electrocuted on a neighbor's electric fence he had put up to protect his property against a pack of wild dogs.

Police charged James Kahl with manslaughter in the death of his longtime neighbor, Bertha Hottinghem.

She died when she went to the end of her porch after a hurricane caught in the electric fence.

Kahl, a 77-year-old retired sailor, put up the 10-foot fence around his property in Golden Hill, Md.

Then he electrified it with triple current instead of installing a regulator that would have sent a harmless flow of current through the fence, cops said.

The 110-volt house current electrocuted the neighbor.

"That amount of voltage could kill anyone," said state policeman Roger Layton. "It's like grabbing a metal lamp with a frayed wire and not being able to let go of it."

"The dog fell in first and bit the fence," Cantrell said. "She didn't let go because it's just a physical reaction. The muscles get tighter."

His own recognizance, refused comment.

"I don't talk to no reporters," Kahl said. "Get Almighty."

Dorchester County state attorney Hugh Vincent said he couldn't comment why Maryland officials charged the retiree with manslaughter.

"It was a tragic situation all around," Vincent said.

Kahl could spend a maximum 10 years in jail if convicted, the prosecutor said.

Boy, 9, shoots pal, cops say

A 9-year-old boy shot a 10-year-old playmate with a 12-gauge shotgun because the kid took his basketball and then refused to give it back, cops said.

Police in Cochranville, Pa., said the victim was hospitalized for treatment of wounds to his neck, shoulder and hand but is expected to recover.

The gunman was charged with attempted homicide, aggravated assault, simple assault and reckless endangering, cops said.

Operagoers chicken out!

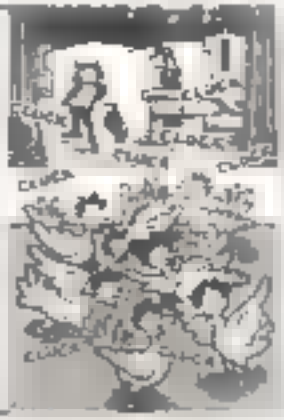
Members of a amateur opera troupe got the shock of their lives, when they visited an Ohio high school — and students responded 25 clucking, clucking chickens in the middle of their performance.

"The students may feel it was a prank, but we do not view what is humorous," said Charles Wolfe, an outraged assistant principal at the school in Fairview Park.

The Cleveland Opera on Tour was giving a Shakespearean recitation when the chickens started flapping, squawking and skittering through the auditorium.

"I saw different teachers trying to catch the chickens," so called opera spokeswoman Betsy Clark.

"The kids started giggling and clapping and the performers couldn't figure out why they were laughing and applauding — right in the middle of a serious Shakespeare dialogue."



Cow gallstones sell for $900 ■ ounce!

Asian importers are paying $900 an ounce — almost twice the price of gold — for rare cattle gallstones in hot demand as sexy aphrodisiacs!

The rare stones, formed in the gallbladder, are in sizzling demand by customers in such Far East spots as Japan, Korea, Hong Kong, Taiwan and Singapore.

"They are just like diamonds," said Dean Meekins of Meekins of Colorado, a division of Con Agra Red Meats Enterprises and the nation's top beef exporter to Japan.

Importers are clamoring for the sexual stimulant, much to the delight of Rocky Mountain meat packers.

Rudy Schlumpmeyer of Meeker said the demand for the amazing sex potion is rising.

"One might go through 300 head of cattle before finding any gallstones, and there there might be a bunch of them or four in each animal," he said.

When dried, the greenish stones range from the size of B-B's to hen's eggs.

It takes two to 10 to make an ounce.

They range in color from rust to bright gold, and are sold in capsules filled with tablets containing only a few grains of the powdered potion.

Workers handpick the gallstones from a filter screen, but most are ignorant of their value, Schlumpmeyer said.

Splasher bandit

San Jose, Calif., cops are on the lookout for the "splasher" — a bandit who specializes in robbing doughnut shops by dumping hot coffee on the clerks and then cleaning out the cash registers.

Police said the robber commits an estimated six robberies and then waits for a while.

"He's back and he's armed," said police after the latest robbery, "because now he's armed and has a partner."

Ocean adventure turns into desperate fight for life

RECOVERING Ken Maffei is happy to be resting in a hospital bed, ahead, after his harrowing experience on the high seas. The valiant adventurer attempted to row his little rubber craft from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., to an island in the Bahamas

'I survived 20 days at sea — in a tiny rubber raft'

Daring Ken Maffei set out to row a child's rubber raft from Florida to the Bahamas. But the swift currents of the Gulf Stream turned the voyage into a 20-day nightmare that almost cost him his life!

The 26-year-old Californian was finally plucked from the sea by the crew of a supertanker that had sighted the raft bobbing on the Atlantic rollers — 650 miles north of where his foolhardy voyage began.

By DICK DONOVAN

"Some people will say I'm crazy, but I really thought I could make it," Ken said from his bed in Burdette Tomlin Memorial Hospital in Cape May, N.J.

"Sometimes, going through life you've got to take chances."

But throughout his 20-day ordeal on the high seas, Ken had only one all-consuming dream that gave him the drive to stay alive.

"All I thought of was strawberry ice cream with Fig Newtons and [illegible] Wheat with real cream," he said through lips blistered and distorted by long exposure to the sun.

Ken had set out in his flimsy raft from Fort Lauderdale dead certain he could ride his way across the Gulf Stream until he reached any one of the Bahama Islands where he hoped to study the plant life.

His equipment included a smaller Army surplus raft loaded with water, food and clothing which he towed behind his rowing raft.

On his second day at sea, he lost his supply raft and most of its provisions. He managed to salvage only two gallons of water.

For the next 18 days, Ken's tiny raft was buffeted by high winds, thunderstorms and was carried eastward by the Stream.

It wasn't long before the raft's cramped quarters began to have their effect on the 6-foot-3 adventurer.

"My feet hung over the sides even when I was sitting," he said. "So I knew it was less than 5-foot long."

Time after time during his 20 days at sea, he was passed by freighters and tankers.

But without a radio or signal flares, he wasn't able to attract their attention. Still he managed to keep his spirits high and refused to accept that death would be his only escape.

"Whenever I thought that this was the end, I would say, 'Stop! You can't think that way. It's not going to keep you alive,'" he recalled. When his supply of food and water ran out, Ken caught rain in his coat. Though he lost 30 pounds over the course of his ordeal, he managed to catch and eat small shrimp and crabs that clustered in patches of seaweed.

He's 6-foot-3 — but his craft was only 5 feet long

Then, on the 20th day, the crew of the Venezuelan supertanker Rich Duchess spotted the raft off the coast of Cape Hatteras, N.C., and Ken's sea odyssey was over.

A Coast Guard helicopter flew him to the hospital in Cape May. A few days later, Ken was released and he headed straight for the bathtub.

TICKETED Arnold Zeeman shows how he purloined the pebble from his car

Pesky pebble costs driver a tidy $50!

By JACK ALEXANDER

A tiny pebble turned out to be a $50 pain in the wallet to salesman Arnold Zeeman, who shunted out his car mat to get rid of it — and was charged with littering.

Zeeman, 50, was bothered by the little rock under his right foot as he drove through Coney Island section of Brooklyn, N.Y. He shook out the mat while waiting at a traffic light.

A few blocks later he was stopped by a sanitation police officer and given a $50 ticket for littering. The cop said Zeeman made the street dirty with dirt and rocks.

"It's not as if I threw a soda can out the window," said Zeeman, who doesn't consider himself a littering "In fact, I keep a bag in the car for no-no's."

Sanitation spokesman Jim Hall said Zeeman's complaint is garbage.

"If the pebble was bothering him, he could've stopped, found it, saved it and brought it home or to a litter basket," said Hall.

Zeeman figures he could fight the fine and win, but has decided to pay it.

Barefoot teen struck by a deadly hotfoot!

by PATT COOKE

A teenage girl walking home barefoot from her best friend's birthday party was killed instantly when she stepped on an electrified steel grate in the sidewalk.

"It was just a death waiting to happen," said police spokesman Dit Calkin of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The tragedy struck as 17-year-old Veronika Parra and two of her friends were walking home from a beach party. The girls were walking past a shopping center when Veronika stepped on the grate that was electrified by faulty wiring carrying 480 volts to a nearby streetlight.

Authorities said Veronika was killed instantly by the electrical shock. The young men's friends suffered mild shocks when they tried to revive her.

City inspectors called to the scene said power that a poorly insulated wire had been improperly run across the lip of the metal bar beneath the grate and the insulation was cut when the grate was placed over it.

"It turned that sewer into a hot plate," said Calkin.

A power company spokesman said the electrical jolt should not have been fatal if Veronika had been wearing shoes.

"If a person was wearing shoes, it wouldn't have happened," said Don Delberg of Florida Power & Light.

Mouse-in-bottle suit settled

A cop won a settlement from a brewing company after he chugged down a bottle of beer — with a dead mouse in it.

Officer Ted Gerardi of Austin, Tex., said he had polished off about half the bottle when he felt something between his lips. He held the bottle up to the light and saw a headless mouse.

Gerardi said he was sick for a month, unable to work, which lost commercials and became terrified of rodents because of the incident.

Lawyers for Adolph Coors Co. announced an out-of-court settlement had been reached between the brewery and the cop in the case.

The brewery had pleaded to appeal an earlier $500,000 judgment awarded by a Dallas County jury.

Fugitive falls into the arms of the law

A spokesman for Kelly was searching a Lubbock, Tex., home for a fugitive when the ceiling crash suddenly crashed through the ceiling — and landed right on the startled cop's face.

The undetected man sought on the parole violation was apparently trying to hide in the attic when the ceiling gave way.

Murder jury told:

Killer suspect stabbed in-laws during a dream

By JACK ALEXANDER

A murder suspect's bizarre dream became a reality when he stabbed his mother-in-law to death and wounded her husband, a Canadian jury was told.

The victims' children told the murder trial the suspect made "animal or grunting-type noises" as he attacked Dennis and Barbara Woods in their Scarborough, Ontario, home.

Kenneth Parks, 34, is on trial for first-degree murder in the death of Mrs. Woods, 43, who was beaten with a tire iron and stabbed. Her hubby was clubbed and stabbed, but survived the surprise attack.

Prosecutor Cathy Martin told the jury that Parks said he had a dream about carrying a knife and "killing" the couple. He told police he fell asleep and the next thing he remembered was seeing Mrs. Woods' face.

Parks drove to his in-laws' home around 4 a.m. he said, let himself in with a set of keys and went to the couple's bedroom, said Miss Martin.

Woods awakened to find someone on top of him, choking him, she said. He "blacked out" and remembers nothing else until cops arrived and discovered he had been stabbed, said the prosecutor.

His sleeping wife was "also attacked in bed and her injuries were consistent with having been hit with a tire iron," said Miss Martin.

The terrified woman managed to make her way to a TV room where she was stabbed several times and left to die.

Some of the couple's six children heard their mother scream and had when they heard the animal-like grunts.

Parks turned himself in to police after the unprovoked attack, saying "he had just killed two people."

Suspenders are in fashion now!

Suspenders are more than holding their own in the fashion scene these days. In fact, they're making a comeback.

Sales of suspenders have risen 600 percent in the past year.

"They have become so popular that most trousers are being manufactured today suspender 'button-ready,'" said Larry Levy, president of Field Brothers menswear.

"As with ties, suspender styles are more subtle," he said. "As opposed to the standard solid blue or black of recent years."

Thief snatches woman's lawn

Oldster Sarah Bruland had a new lawn installed at her home, then looked out the window just hours later — and discovered some chief had stolen her new yard!

The widow had put in a 600-square-foot plot of Astroturf at her home in Swansea, Wales.

But when night came, a crook peeled the bogus sod from its concrete base and headed for the hills.

Hubby has to get rid of his 100-year-old . . .

BACKYARD GALLOWS!

By JOE BERGER

Fun-loving hubby Terry Lumbley has presented with an ultimatum — either his gallows goes or his wife takes a hike.

So the accommodating cop is removing the creepy contraption he's kept in his backyard for the past five years and he's putting it up for auction.

GALLOWS with a grisly history is demonstrated by Terry Lumbley

"I really like the bloody thing but my wife says it makes her skin crawl and she doesn't want it around anymore," the exasperated patrolman told reporters in Watford, England.

"She said either it was going or she was going. And I love Ginny more than these gallows so the choice wasn't a tough one at all."

The century-old apparatus — which Terry's hubby and policeman has played an eerie role in British history — having been used to execute four of the country's most notorious murderers.

The playful policeman bought the working gallows from an executioner in 1963 and has relished showing off his deadly device to visitors.

But his sensitive missus hasn't shared in his delight.

"That old thing really gives me the creeps," she said. "I put up with it as long as I could and then I put my foot down. I told Terry I couldn't live with it anymore."

COP Terry Lumbley says goodbye to the beloved gallows that has stood in his backyard for five years — much to his wife's distress.

Wife didn't want it hanging around the house anymore

Faced with choosing between his gal and his gallows, the loving hubby knew better than to get hung up on his spine-chilling conversation piece.

There is some consolation, however. The folks at the auction house say that even though there's no catalog price for secondhand gallows, it could bring as much as $40,000.

World record bounty on killers' heads

High-speed hero Mickey Thompson and his wife Trudy were auto racing's most beloved couple till goons gunned them down like animals outside their secluded California mansion.

Now, grief-stricken friends and kinfolk are offering the biggest reward in the annals of crime — $255,000 for the creeps who killed the debonair millionaire and his lady.

By LAUREL DOWS

"I want them," said Mickey's mom Geneva Thompson, 88. "I just want them."

And frustrated cops say they hope the whopping reward will pry loose the information they need to crack the baffling case.

"You're talking about a very large sum of money," said sheriff's Lt. Ken Chaisson. "It could cause an individual with direct information to come forward with it and start a new life."

Flamboyant Mickey, 59, became known as the Speed King in the 1960s when he set the first of his nearly 500 auto speed and endurance records. He was the first man ever to drive a car more than 400 m.p.h.

In recent years the headlines-grabber had made a name as a race promoter.

But the life of glamour and glory came to an end the morning assassins ambushed Mickey and Trudy as the driveway of their posh Brentwood home and shot them dead.

Friends say Mickey and several anonymous death threats in the days before the killers struck, but investigators still don't know the motive for the grisly slayings. They say they've checked out hundreds of leads without success.

"It's been very slow work," said Sgt. Ray Verdugo.

So desperate relatives and friends banded together to offer more than a quarter of a million dollars for "information leading directly to the arrest and conviction of persons responsible" for the horror.

The reward poster carries composite drawings of three suspects seen in the area about the time of the slayings. Mickey's son Danny Thompson, 28, said he's confident the bounty will spur someone to speak up.

"Could be that somebody's girlfriend gets mad, maybe a call," said the heartsick son. "There's a lot of money for somebody."

They said their vows in 1908!

Silver sweeties wed 80 years

After 80 years of marriage, Otey and Edna Hartner say their love hasn't dimmed one bit — in fact, it's grown stronger!

The couple has drawn closer year by year since they said their vows on April 12, 1908.

"Being married for so long wasn't something we really planned," explained Otey, 100, who lives in a nursing home with Edna in Cape Girardeau, Missouri. "We just fell in love and are still in love."

The silver-haired sweethearts met for the first time in elementary school and fell in love at once. They never looked at anyone else all their lives long, they say.

"From the time we met neither one of us ever courted anyone else," said Otey, who is robust and chipper for his age. "She turned down all other dates.

"We never cared about anybody else. And we weren't happy if we were separated, as our parents said we might as well get married. So we did."

Otey and his precious Edna were 20 and she was just 18. She had coal-black hair in those days and Otey recalls her as the prettiest girl he'd ever seen.

The couple made their home in Ilmo, Missouri, where they owned a dime store. They had one son, Harold, who died childless at the age of 61.

Today there is only one couple on record who was married longer than the Hartners — a Kentucky couple who celebrated their 82nd wedding anniversary in 1972. But although they're pleased to be among the few who have lived so long, the Hartners say their greatest luck was in finding each other.

"We realize how very fortunate we've been to have spent so many years together," said Otey.

A few years ago, the Hartners moved into a nursing home. They are frail and hard of hearing, but in good health, and what gets them apart is their love for one another.

"Their devotion to one another is amazing," nurse Phyllis Watkins told The NEWS.

"Otey and Edna make us more than hospital beds [illegible] so they could look [illegible] at night."

COURAGEOUS student John Poltreyman, with his faithful guide dog Mandy. The 23-year-old college student is studying to be a teacher of handicapped youngsters.

Student, blinded in suicide try, says he 'sees' life clearly now

By SUSAN JHAYTON

John Poltreyman sees life more clearly now that he's lost his eyesight.

The Ogden, Utah, college student blew his vision away with a shotgun in a failed suicide attempt eight years ago and he credits the tragedy with changing his life for the better.

"After losing my eyesight I'm able to see people for what they are inside," he told The NEWS. "I don't see the color of their skin or hair, or the kind of clothes they wear. I see them for themselves."

Poltreyman, 23, says he tried to end his life years ago because he was on a downhill course with no hope of taking control of his life. He was a high school dropout with a drinking problem, he said, and simply grew tired of his troubled existence.

In 1968 he placed the muzzle of a shotgun under his chin and pulled the trigger. The blast severed his optic nerve and tore away half his face — but miraculously, it missed his brain and he survived.

"After my suicide attempt I woke up and said, 'Okay, it's time to go on!' " he recalled.

Poltreyman underwent 20 operations to repair his shattered face. But he still bears the scars of his death try — and he is totally blind.

Today, with the help of his trusted guide dog Mandy, Poltreyman is going to college. He is studying history and plans to teach disabled kids when he finishes his master's degree next year.

Meanwhile, the courageous man travels to high schools near his home, talking to kids about suicide and how to avoid it.

20,000 roaches in average home

If you flip on the kitchen light and see one cockroach there are at least 300 more hiding in your home, researchers report.

University of Florida researchers studying chemicals that make roaches sterile went looking for cockroaches and found plenty.

"We wanted to know how effective the chemicals were, so we caught roaches in over one thousand apartments and calculated how many of the insects were present," said entomologist Richard Patterson.

"We were surprised at how many we found — an average of 13,000 to 20,000 per home," he said.

A beggar woman named Rashida must have toiled like crazy during her 46 years on the streets of Jordan — when she died, she left relatives a cash estate of $237,000.

Her staggering stash proves that begging is profitable. The old hitch made more than some of her relatives who have respectable jobs.

My name has made my life hell!

By JOE BERGER

Soft-spoken schoolteacher Larry Singleton's life has become a nightmare of rejection, embarrassment and ridicule — because he has the same name as America's most notorious rapist.

"It may seem like a joke to some people, but it's really starting to get me down," groaned luckless Larry, 37.

"People can get downright mean sometimes, maybe without even trying to."

The Berkeley, Calif., man's ordeal began this spring during a fire storm of publicity about the release from the California Men's Colony prison of another Larry Singleton — sadistic rapist Lawrence Singleton, 43.

Singleton the sicko was imprisoned in 1979 for sexually and leaving her to die in a roadside ditch.

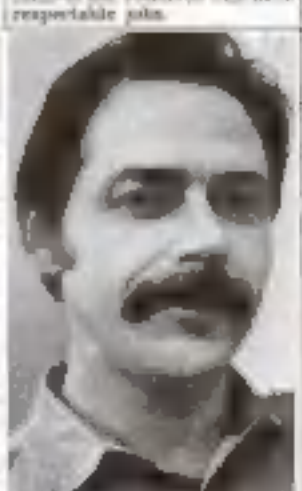
And Singleton the schoolteacher, though no relation to his no-good namesake, has been paying for his crime with an avalanche of insults and they feel obligated to make some wisecrack," said the bemused teacher.

When he called a vet to make an appointment for his cat, the receptionist hung up on him the minute she heard his name.

When he tried to find a new apartment, landlords refused to call him back.

And when he telephoned a restaurant to make a reservation, he's reluctant to give his own name for fear there'll be a lynch party waiting.

"I've gotten to the point where I'm embarrassed to even tell people my own name," said the law-abiding Larry. "That's



Incredible experienc

Child who

By IRWIN FISHER

A four-year-old girl who died during her surgery spent seven minutes in heaven before doctors revived her, a top scientist report

"This is stunning evidence of an afterlife," Charles Katz told reporters in Calais, France. "The child's parents are staunch atheists and shielded her from any form of religious indoctrination.

"She had no notion of heaven or hell. She did know that God existed. And yet she describes meeting Him in great detail.

"She also speaks of Jesus by name — and says He personally met her at the end of a tunnel of light that led to heaven."

The drama reportedly unfolded while little Marie-Lenoel underwent surgery to correct a congenital heart defect and died during a critical part of the surgery.

French doctors managed to restart her heart after several minutes. And they later listened in stunned silence as she told them of her journey into the afterlife.

At their request, psychic girl Katz interviewed the child under hypnosis. A transcript of the session revealed that she was terrified as her spirit rose out of her lifeless body and began its ascent into heaven.

"I was frightened and wanted mommy," said the girl. "I wanted to go home but couldn't turn around in the tunnel with bright light at the end.

"Then I started flying and going faster until I came to the city. I wasn't scared anymore because the shining man was there.

"He didn't say anything to me but I was safe because it was Jesus. He made me very happy and walked with me on the buildings that were shiny and white.

"We went to the throne and it was bigger than a house. God was on it and He smiled at me and then He took me and Jesus into his heart."

Just what the child meant by "being taken into God's heart" isn't clear. But Dr. Katz thinks she might have become one with God because she next speaks of "just being happy" before doctors revived her and she came back into life.

"I have heard similar descriptions of an afterlife from adults who have had the near-death experience," said the expert.

"But this innocent child

Mom puts screaming tot into hot oven, cops say

Cheryl Struman was jailed after she tossed her screaming 3-year-old daughter into a hot oven and threatened to cook the child "like a roast," cops said.

The little girl was treated at Fla., for second-degree burns and released.

According to police, the 23-year-old mother told them that the little girl wouldn't stop crying as she put her on the oven rack, and told her she only wanted to scare the child so she would behave.

The burned girl's 4-year-old sister and 5-year-old brother also had bruises and showed physical signs of abuse and neglect, Florida health officials said.
